South Church Bazaar Proves Big Success

Several Hundred Attend Two-Day Dickens Carnival for Which Town Hall Underwent Unusual Transformation

The Town Hall underwent a surprising and altogether pleasing transformation last Friday and Saturday when the King's Daughters of the South church presented a Dickens carnival. The old hall took on a new and more picturesque appearance with the addition of booths constructed in old English style, and the stage was converted through the stage manager's skill into a Dickens room.

Through the afternoon and evening several hundred persons visited the carnival to partake of the offerings for sale at the various booths, named after some of Dickens' writings. In the evening, tableaux picturing Dickens characters and incidents in the stories were presented.

The carnival was devised and directed by Mrs. George M. K. Holmes, with Miss Anna Kuhn as general chairman. For the entertainment the stage manager was Walden E. Bassett, and his two able assistants were Frank R. Petty and Irving Whitcomb.

The evening entertainment was opened with music, with Mrs. Philip Ripley at the piano, Miss Susan Ripley playing the violin and Miss Helen Eaton on the cello. The pastor of the South church, the Rev. Frederick B. Noss, introduced the entertainment each evening with a few remarks about Charles Dickens and his works.

Nathan C. Hamblin impersonated Charles Dickens, Mrs. Eugene M. Weeks, his daughter Mary Dickens, and Miss Mary W. Bell impersonated his other daughter, Kate Dickens. Owing to illness Miss Fannie E. Davis was unable to take the part of Kate Dickens, but the part was ably taken care of at the last moment by Miss Bell. A short dialogue and readings were carried on by Dickens and his two daughters.

Appropriate music accompanied the program, with solo singing by Ruth Brainerd. The booths, the signs and the lanterns were constructed by Mr. G.B.S. Trott and family. Miss Dorothy Trott and Miss Mabel Marshall were in charge of makeup.

Find Automobile Ablaze in Woods

An automobile registered to Joseph Sarni of 41 Billings avenue, Medford, was found ablaze in the woods on Gould road Wednesday night. The gasoline tank apparently had exploded, and the machine was practically destroyed.

Responding to a still alarm, the brush fire truck travelled many miles to extinguish the blaze.

The police learned that Sarni is dead and that his partner in business is Frank Rotondo of 4 White street, Medford.

Neither the driver nor any occupants of the burned machine were around when the fire apparatus arrived on the scene.

Man Found Lying Near Vale Track

A man who gave his name as John Charette of Crown Hill, Nashua, N. H., was picked up by Andover police near the tracks a quarter of a mile east of the Ballardvale railroad station last night. He was removed in the fire department ambulance to the Lawrence General hospital where he was treated for injuries which he stated he received when he fell off a freight train which he was trying to jump.

Hospital authorities reported last night that they were unsure of the extent of his injuries. Police stated that he had evidently been drinking liquor of some sort, smelling very much like rubbing alcohol. His condition last night was reported as being good.

Charette was found with his heels almost on the railroad track and his head down on the dirt embankment. The engineer of a passing train reported to the Ballardvale crossing tender that he had seen the man lying near the track, and the crossing tender reported the matter to Chief Dane.

Ballardvale Youth Dies After Crash

William K. Haggerty, 21, of Chester street, Ballardvale, died at the Lawrence General hospital at eight o'clock Wednesday morning as the result of an automobile accident on Osgood road Tuesday night. This is the fifth fatal accident in Andover this year.

Haggerty was discovered about 6.30 Tuesday evening lying on the lawn of Daniel Harrington's property on Osgood road. A dog owned by Walter Baker of Dascomb road first discovered the unconscious man, and when the dog would not come at his call, Baker went to the scene and found the prostrate form. He called the police from the home of Louis Bourdelais, and then the fire department ambulance removed the man to the Lawrence General hospital where authorities gave him no chance to live.

Haggerty's car was found lying on its left side facing Ballardvale on the right side of the road. Authorities believe that the car tipped over when Haggerty attempted to avoid hitting a mailbox on the curved road.

Mr. Harrington told police that about one-half hour before the body was found, he heard something that sounded like a crash. He went to his door and looked out, but could not see anything. He assumed that it was a dump truck passing.

Tuesday's Ballot

From beginning to end next Tuesday's ballot should be scanned carefully by every voter before he marks down a single cross. The personal contests are all important, and so is each of the three referendum questions. There have always been too many blanks appearing when our ballots have been counted, and since this is only an indication of public indifference, it should be corrected. No voter fulfills his duty by merely going to the polls; only by voting and voting correctly does he help in governing this country as it should be governed.

The gubernatorial race has been an unusual one because three candidates have loomed important in the final results. Goodwin, whose name on the ballot is followed by the enigmatic party designation "Equal Tax" is important only in that he may take away votes from the only two candidates, Bacon and Curley, who have a chance to win. He cannot win, that is evident.

In order to make his vote count, each voter should determine not to throw it away by voting for the "Equal Tax" candidate. Democrats and Republicans alike should focus on either Bacon and Curley and not on a man whose policies are so ill-defined that he ran in the primaries on both tickets.

Not so long ago it seemed a certainty that the Democratic candidate would win, but recent events have changed the complexion of the races, that now it appears that the voters will choose the better qualified of the two, Gaspar G. Bacon, Massachusetts cannot afford a governor with the reputation for extravagance that his terms as mayor of Boston have given Curley. The state now realizes this, thanks to Mr. Bacon's forceful declarations of policy and equally forceful expositions of the Democratic candidate's past errors, to express it as mildly as possible.

The other contests, while not so interesting, are not lacking in importance. Of special interest to Andover are the two contests for the General Court, both the Senate and the lower house.

Since the irrational and unjust gerrymander which deprived our town of a representative in the Lower House and made it politically an appendage of South Lawrence, Andover has had no real voice in the General Court. Fortunately, however, we have had in the Upper Chamber a fine, reliable, and public-spirited man in Senator J. Bradford Davis, who is this autumn again a candidate for the office. It would be a pity if a man of Senator Davis's character and efficiency should be defeated. He has been attentive to the interests of his constituents, whether Republican or Democratic; he has earned and retained the respect of his associates in the State House; he has a spotless record; and he is an honest man. No legislator can expect to satisfy all the voters in his district all the time; but those who cast their ballots for Senator Davis can be sure that, if elected, he will scrutinize bills with care and make his decisions in accordance with his conscience. Although not a radical, he is certainly no reactionary; and he believes, with Calvin Coolidge, that it is the right of every man "to be well born, well nurtured, well educated, well employed, and well paid." He will do his best to achieve that end. If intelligence, experience, and courage are considered, Senator Davis should have a large majority in this town.

For the first time in years Andover does have a real chance to elect a local man representative. Everyone concedes that Rep. Thomas J. Lane will be re-elected, primarily because he has had a fine record in his terms of office, but it looks as if the very poor record of the other representative will mean his defeat. Attorney Romeo E. Davis is the only Andover man running for one of these two positions, and he certainly should be given a good vote here. It is Andover's real chance to undo the work of the gerrymander which combined South Lawrence and Andover. A poor candidate from South Lawrence should never defeat a good candidate from Andover.

The Referenda

The first question on the ballot guarantees a headache to all those who failed to study it closely before going to the polls. It is an attempt to modify the anti-steel trap law which Andover and the state approved in 1930, Andover by a vote of 2099 to 767. However, the modification is not an ill-considered one, since a "Yes" vote by the state will only mean that if a town so desires, it may suspend the operation of the act, and further, that the Commissioner of Conservation may also suspend the act's operation in any territory under his jurisdiction for a period not to exceed thirty days. A "Yes" vote could be given to this question quite justifiably on the grounds that it would give to the town one of the many powers usurped by the state government. It would mean that Andover could take care of the steel-trap problem here, and to all those who fear that these inhumane devices might be used here, it is only necessary to point out that the previous vote indicates that Andover will never suspend this law.

The license question has already been discussed at length in these columns. All one has to do to make up his mind how to vote on this question is to journey to Andover square about 9:30 tomorrow evening; the conditions there will surely mean that Andover will vote "No" on both hard liquor and so-called soft liquor licenses. The thing to watch out for is not to be fooled into voting "Yes" on soft liquors, for the soft liquor licenses have been the trouble-makers here in town. The liquor they sell may be "soft," but it certainly has produced disgraceful effects.

The last question deals with whether or not pari-mutuel betting on horse and dog races should be permitted in this county. Andover has been seized by the betting craze, just as has every other town in the nation. That betting will go on regardless of the vote on this question.

The betting question will probably not have much effect here, no matter what the answer. It is not probable that this part of Essex county at least will have any race tracks built, because of the proximity of Rockingham. A "No" vote will not stop betting; a "Yes" vote will not increase betting. So the vote really matters little here, and your bet on the result is just as good as ours.

Polls Open 6.00 a.m. to 6.30 p.m.

Another Side

To the Editor of the Andover Townsman:
Two aspects of the license question in Andover having been presented with force by citizens, one of whom is a comparatively new-comer, and so, presumably more accurate with far different traditions than those of our towns, I, herewith, present a side of the question which was a personal experience, and which shows what license has done to an "Upright... sober New England town". An experience from which I sincerely hope other women and their children may be spared.

On an evening late in June, I came up from the 8.30 train on the north side of Essex street, unaware that a saloon had been established there. I heard an uproar, and two drunken men burst out of the door, one of them named beyond control, and whom I was scarcely able to avoid.

As I neared the Colonial Theatre, another man staggered around the corner, fell flat and lay there. Seeing still another, in like condition, approaching, I fled to the other side of the street, disgusted by such a degraded sight—and on an Andover street!

The Essex street license, revoked in the summer, has again been granted, thus overriding the veto of the selectmen. This confirms the opinion that, what has occurred may happen again should license be continued in the town.

Living near the centre of the town, my yard a convenient looting place, and my porch a repository for empty bottles—whiskey et al—a constant annoyance.

As the temperance of liquor out of town, it is possible as heretofore, for all who wish to buy bottled goods, to continue doing so, just as was done before license was granted in Andover; and probably with as little loss to local merchants, in the buying of household commodities. Those who would go out of town to buy liquors by the glass are hardly the type who would burden themselves, had they the extra means, by buying household supplies to bring home, when there are so many stores right here to supply their family needs.

The signs in and about the square, certainly the present would convince strangers that this is a wide open, wet town. Having lived all my life in the Andovers, and taken pride in the long established reputation of this town which has been my home for so many years, I deeply regret this retrograde movement; and I especially regret the women voters to consider whether they wish to encounter such revolting sights or are willing to have their children witness or become accustomed to such conditions as were forced upon Andover woman?

If not, vote No on all license questions on November 6.

FRANCES W. ABBOTT

A "Yes" Vote

Editor, Andover Townsman:
It might seem from last week's editorial that the Alcoholic Beverages Commission was responsible for failure to curb the abuses of our town license situation. If that is so, why not center our attention on the Commission, reputedly amenable to corrective appeal? Why not permit those self respecting places that you recognize "as a credit to the town," to continue their legitimate business for the many self-respecting men and women that want to patronize them? Not all of our citizens have comfortable homes and clubs where they can conveniently obtain wholesome wines and beer (not mentioning less wholesome hard liquors) whether we have local license or not.

Andover voted for repeal of prohibition. Let facts realities, be taken into consideration in our judgments, and temperate in our expressions, bearing in mind that if we vote "No" we provide opportunity for illegal sale (not unprecedented in our orderly town) or compel a considerable number of our people to go to neighboring communities where the environment is beyond our control, and might, with reason, cause us real apprehension.

R. N. C. BARNES

(Editor's Note—Were the town of Andover able to permit the self-respecting places to continue, without also having to tolerate the less respectable places, the town would undoubtedly vote "Yes" next Tuesday. Unfortunately, however, Andover cannot rid itself of these other places, because the Alcoholic Beverages Commission, although "reputedly amenable to corrective appeal" is not "actually amenable" to such appeal. This was shown, as has been repeatedly stated in the Townsman and as Mrs. Abbott's communication points out, by the refusal of the A. B. C. to uphold the selectmen in their decision to revoke a local license, a decision made only after a hearing had been held with numerous complaints being presented.

Illegal sale is much easier to stop than legal sale conducted in a disreputable manner. The environment in neighboring communities is not only beyond our control; it is also beyond our desire or our need to control. The Townsman wishes to help Andover business in any way, just so long as it is a business of which the town can be proud. But no town paper would be helping its community by upholding business which has become a detriment to the really respectable stores in our town.)

Explanation of Question

To the Editor of the Townsman:
My dear Sir,
I should like to call the attention of members of the Andover League of Women Voters and other readers of the Townsman to the possibly ambiguous wording of the liquor question which will appear on the ballot, November 6.

The question is so worded that if you vote "Yes" on Question I [Shall licenses be granted in this town for the sale therein of all alcoholic beverages (whisky, rum, gin, malt beverages, wines and all other alcoholic beverages)] it means that you vote for the sale of hard liquor in Andover, and the probable granting of common victuallers licenses as well as licenses for the sale of package goods.

If you wish to keep the saloon out of Andover you must vote "No" on Question I as well as on Question II.

Yours sincerely,
HELEN T. CHICKERING

License and the Tax Rate

Dear Editor:
A local restaurant-keeper who has a beer license told me the other day that the income from liquor licenses in Andover had reduced the local tax rate $2.00. This seems pretty far-fetched to me. I wonder if you can tell the Townsman readers if this is true?

Skeptic

(Editor's Note—Did you smell the restaurant-owner's breath when he made this statement? As you know, an expenditure of $16,000 raises the tax rate $1.00, and similarly, income of $16,000 reduces the rate $1.00. It would in other words require license fees amounting to $32,000 to prove that the restaurant-owner was sober.

There also have been a number of one-day licenses. If anyone can figure a saving of $1.00 on the tax rate from this, he certainly should not be conducting a restaurant.)

Close Them All Up

To the Editor of the Townsman:
Among the voters who, on November 6, will decide whether or not licenses shall be continued for the sale of strong drink in Andover will be found, at least, the four following types of our fellow citizens:

I
THE MODERATE DRINKER
This type of voter rarely or never drinks to excess and only during meals. Without intoxicant of some kind no meal to him seems quite complete, since it stimulates the appetite, elevates the spirit and aids digestion.

Any law depriving him of this privilege he claims to be an infringement upon his God-given right.

II
THE OCCASIONAL DRINKER
This type indulges in intoxicating drink only on special occasions, not as an aid to digestion but rather as an aid to good fellowship as, for instance, when some neighbor or friend calls in for a chat. At such times, strong drink at attractively served breaks down formality, taps fresh springs of conversation and at the same time, testifies to a hospitable spirit. To deprive one of such convivial entertainment by any law is regarded by him as a gross wrong and should not be tolerated.

III
THE DAY-LABORER DRINKER
This type of voter demands some place in Andover where, with other companions of like taste and social standing, he may freely indulge his thirst for strong drink. He wants to buy it by the glass when and where he pleases, and he is not over fastidious as to the character of the place nor the reputation of the dealer. Whether the seller is immaculately dressed and clean shaven, or wearing corduroy and unshaven; whether his liquor is served in thin Venetian goblets or in a thick yellow mug; whether the inmates are so-called "respectable" citizens or low-down bums—these outward differences are not in his mental picture when his thirst is upon him.

Any law curtailing his freedom to buy a glass of whiskey, gin or beer when and where he pleases he will resist to the last ditch.

IV
THE LIQUOR PROFITEER
This type of voter includes the Distiller, the Seller and the Landlord each of whom profits financially by a town license. As a class these men rarely drink liquor, some are actual teetotallers, but their thirst for money outruns the drinkers' thirst for liquor.

These four types of voters are alike in this: each is motivated solely by his individual satisfaction, what effect his action will have upon the institutions of Andover, and its reputation, what temptation it flings athwart the pathway of our youth, what disruption it brings about in many of our homes, what awful consequences inevitably follow the drink habit—all this is completely subordinated to his thirst for drink or his thirst for money.

Three of the types of voters namely: the Moderate Drinker, the Occasional Drinker, and the Liquor Profiteer, would gladly make liquor traffic here in Andover "respectable," so that the very elite may freely and without compromising their high standing in our community purchase their cocktails.

They demand their liquor dispensed in bottles beautifully labeled and artistically sealed and from a "store" elaborately festooned and that it be brought to their door by auto.

These "respectable" drinkers who buy their gin, rum, whiskey and brandy for purely home consumption would like the town to forbid its sale by the glass in restaurants or over the counter.

But if intoxicating liquor is so necessary to health and social fellowship as claimed by these so-called "respectable" drinkers why should not the day laborer be allowed to share in its benefits? Why allow any discrimination in our town licenses?

The unvarnished truth is that intoxicating drink, whether sold by the case to the well-to-do citizen, or by the glass to the "working man," is the most damnable curse tolerated on this planet, it curses him who sells and it curses him who drinks; and woe to Andover if it hugs to its bosom this traffic under the sanction of law.

In the name of Andover's 2000 young boys and girls, in the name of our honored institutions of learning and in the name of Almighty God, let us, on November 6, close up every place where liquor as a beverage is at present sold.

Roth String Quartet at Abbot Academy

In 1928 Abbot Academy introduced to Andover the Roth Quartet, which is to appear again at the academy next Thursday night at eight. The quartet was unknown hereabouts as it was making its first tour of the United States. A tremendously successful New York concert brought this finished group of Hungarian artists to the attention of Abbot. A recital soon followed—a concert that will be long remembered by those who heard it.

Six years have passed, and the Roth Quartet is one of the more famous quartets of the world. Now their appearance at Abbot Academy is in the nature of a return compliment for the faith the school had in the unknown group in 1928.

One change has been made in the quartet since their first appearance at Abbot. Janos Roth has succeeded Albert van Doorn as the cellist. Feri Roth is the first violin and leader of the quartet, Jeno Aul is the second violin, and Ferenc Molnar is the viola player. These four men are artists in their own right; but they have so molded their artistry and personalities that they have become a wonderful quartet. Not since the Flonzaley Quartet was at the peak of its great art has there been another group which could more nearly match its subtlety and refinement better than the present Roth Quartet. Together with the London String Quartet, and perhaps the fine Hart House Quartet from Canada, the Roth Quartet enjoys a popularity that has been gained by preeminence as an artistic group of players.

Two echos of the Roth Quartet New York concert of October 16th may be of interest. The New York Herald Tribune says in part: "The collective tone quality is unusually well balanced and blended; the four musicians are to be relied upon for exceptionally lucid, relevant interpretations which disclose fine points of detail and nuances of mood and color. The performance last night was a notable instance of artistic unity and mutual sympathy, of musicianship and poetic sensitiveness in the playing of familiar masterpieces"—Laurence Gilman.

"Olin Downes in the New York Times said: 'Few ensembles possess the fine devotion to a composition, the quiet and unostentatious integrity that this group habitually displays.'"

The Roth Quartet will make its Abbot

In Memoriam

SARAH M. WAGSTAFF

Her many friends will miss Sarah Wagstaff because she was loyal to them one and all.

Their sorrows were her sorrows; their joys were her joys.

A gracious lady of the old school with a beautiful personality. She knew and loved many of the fine old families of Andover even to the third generation.

She leaves a brother, James William who has faithfully cared for this frail, flower-like sister for many years although an old gentleman himself.

COURT OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS
April term, A.D. 1931, held by adjournment at Salem.

Frank H. Hardy and others, inhabitants of the Town of Andover in said County, by their petition to said Commissioners, represent that the highway in Andover known as the River road, from a point near Fish Brook, so-called, at the westerly end of the macadam road built in 1928, and thence extending easterly to the boundary line between the Towns of Andover and Tewksbury, is unsuited to the present requirements of traffic, and that common convenience and necessity require that the same be widened and straightened, and that specific repairs be made thereon, and pray that after due notice and a hearing, the County Commissioners may lay out, alter, or relocate, said highway and discontinue such parts as by reason of their action may no longer be required, and that they may order specific repairs to be made on the said highway, all as in their judgment may be required.

This petition was entered at the present term, when notice was ordered given to all persons and corporations interested therein of the place and time where and when the Commissioners would meet for the purpose of viewing the premises and hearing such order in relation to the prayer of said petition as by law they may be authorized to do, as by their order of notice on file and of record will more fully appear.

It having been made to appear that all persons and corporations interested therein have been duly notified of the place and time of meeting, we, the County Commissioners for said County, did on the 26th day of May, A.D. 1931, meet at the Court House in the City of Salem, when and where the parties appeared, and no person interested appeared to object, and having viewed the premises and heard all parties who desired to be heard, we do now adjudge that common convenience and necessity require that the said highway be relocated and that specific repairs be made thereon, as prayed for in said petition.

In testimony whereof, we have hereunto set our hands this 29th day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one.

"Witch" Returns to Sunset Rock

By MARION LAMERE

What impulse led me from my warm fire-side I'll never know. There I stood shivering, on the uncertain gray streak that marked the roadway, while the pines moaned, lesser trees whimpered and the bushes along the path shrank into the darkness.

My feet seemed strangely fixed, and while I struggled to free them, she came toward me. Her crossed white kerchief gashed the blackness like a wound-stripe on the sleeve of Time. Her hands were pale against her gown. Under a snowy coil her face was serene and smiling. She spoke gently:

"I do not frighten you, I trust."

"No indeed," I chattered. It's strange to meet anyone here at this hour. You live near? You are . . . ?"

"I was Martha Allen. My father, Andrew Allen once owned all this land. It was here, married Thomas Carrier. This is the only night of the year when you might meet me. I am fortunate. It is more pleasant to talk over one's happiness, isn't it? I was happy here."

"You were Martha Carrier, the witch? Oh, forgive me, I mean—you were accused and tried—"

"And hanged," she added. Then sadly: "Oh, the poor deluded folk! How long they repented! We pitied them so, later, Sam Wardwell, Mary Parker and I."

"Would it grieve you to tell of those days?" I asked, curiosity overcoming fear.

"I'd love to," she said warmly, "but come with me to the great tree where Tom and I sat often and watched the sunset, and where I brought the children to play. One's wits work faster in known surroundings and I must talk quickly; the time is short."

"My husband, Thomas Carrier, came down from Billerica to court me, and after our marriage we settled in Andover. Strange tales were told about Tom, many inspired by jealousy."

"Twas said that his real name was Morgan, that he had been one of the bodyguard of King Charles I of England, and that on the day set for the execution, the regular headsman failed to appear and my Tom was ordered to wield the ax. When Tom told me in secrecy, I can't divulge even now, but I will say that he must have made a fine figure of a soldier. A big powerful man, carried himself like a king, and was well able to make a good living for his family. He lived to 109."

"But evil rumor is hard to down. The small-pox struck the town—we had it in our own home—and folk began to whisper that Tom had brought it and that he was accused. I spoke up for my man, as you may imagine. I fear my tongue was sharp then and I said bitter things that were used against me later."

Witch-Finding

"Just about this time, poor Betsy Ballard fell ill. She and Joseph with their ten children lived where the library now stands. The place was then a bog, and with the care of the family and the dampness there was no wonder the poor soul sickened and couldn't regain her strength. Joe, daft with worry, was easily persuaded to have the witch-finding girls brought from Danvers, to discover if anyone was afflicting his wife."

"Twas a strange sight, the May day we were assembled in North Parish Meeting House to be judged by the two lasses, 12-year-old Ann Putnam and her friend, whose name escapes me. The Rev. Thomas Barnard made a prayer and bade the girls tell the truth. Then they were blindfolded and we were told to pass slowly by."

"At once they went into contortions, wailed and squirmed and moaned as though in the clutches of the devil. Then we were told to lay hands on them, and as some of us touched them they became quiet. How they enjoyed their performance, the witless little minxes!"

"Those who quieted them were pronounced witches and accused of being in league with the Powers of Darkness. I was one of eight held."

"Constable John Ballard got a warrant for our arrest, and while beset with fear, some claimed that they had accomplices in evil rites, until finally, forty townsfolk were carried off to Salem jail. Then our torture began."

"There on Sunset Rock, while night birds called eerily and great clouds drifted across the sky, chills crawled up my spine as Martha Carrier told of trials and tests that came straight from the Inquisition, and of queries certainly inspired by the questioners' knowledge of Walpurgis Night rites of the Black Mass."

"Of the final court scene and her execution, she said little."

"Everyone has read that," she explained. "It was harrowing to me, when my little Sarah and Richard were made to accuse me. Poor child, saying innocently, that she had been a witch ever since she was six years old, and adding, 'Brother Richard says I shall be eight in November.'"

"My sister Mary's husband, Dr. Roger Toothaker and their son, Allen, testified against me. A shiftless brother-in-law. He became so interested in what he called the psychological aspect of the trials, he stayed on in Salem, and the town had to support his family. Poor Mary had her troubles."

Personalities

"Now, when I think of it, there were amusing moments. Fancy some of them admitting that they had held their witch revels on the shore of Five-Mile Pond, and had been baptized by the devil in the Shawashin River, at midnight! Those very ones wouldn't dare put their noses out of doors, after dark."

"And poor, feeble old Ann Foster, who died in jail. She was supposed to have ridden on a broomstick to Salem Village, with her daughter, Mary Lacey riding behind her. When she rode with me, she said, the stick broke, and we came down in a gathering of 300 witches, where the Rev. Mr. Burroughs and another, presumably the Rev. Mr. Dane, were taking an active part in the festivities."

"I knew Goody Ann well. She lived in the homestead that was off the present Elm street—the one to the right of the road, with the great white barn. When Richardson had his stables and track there, Goody Ann's witch-cellar was on the site of the bandstand. There she was supposed to fashion her rag puppets into the semblance of those she wished to afflict, then burn or stick pins in them, and the persons would suffer. A bit of superstition almost as old as the world. It is still believed, do you know?"

"It is," I assured her. "I've seen white magic made to offset it, right in New York, in the foreign section."

"Ah, well, it takes long for some to learn."

"You were talking of the others."

"Yes. There was Sam Wardwell, as fine a man as you'd find. Sam blamed his plight on unrequited love. He said that some 20 years previously he had been smitten by a maid named Barker, who'd have none of him, and while in that hopeless, melancholy state, had been induced to make a pact with the Evil one."

"He was married at the time of the trials, and his wife, Sarah was accused also. It was perhaps the first he had heard of his early love, but she couldn't hold it against him, for he later recanted, and said that the examiners had so insisted, he had finally believed that he was in league with the Devil, and he could think of no time when he had made the pact, unless in his moonstruck, lovelorn state."

"But Sam met a fate like mine. Persons testified that he told fortunes from the lines in one's hand, and had predicted events which came true."

"We were worried in jail over Mistress Abigail Faulkner, daughter of the Rev. Dane, who was also condemned. Her child was soon to be born and conditions were bad for her. Finally she was reprieved as the judges dare not take an innocent child's life. She named her baby, Ammi Ruhamah, which means 'My People Have Obtained Mercy.'"

"Mary Osgood, wife of Captain John Osgood, was quite be-addled for a time, after her imprisonment. She was a fine woman, the daughter of the Rev. Robert Clements of Haverhill. She had brought up twelve children, and was loved and respected by all who knew her. Her poor husband advised her to admit anything she was asked, thinking it better to agree than to antagonize her examiners."

"She declared that she, with Eunice Frye, Abigail Barker and Goody Tyler had ridden, all on one stick, to Danvers, to hold unruly revels. 'Stick,' mind you. With those skirts they'd have needed a dirigible! Dame Osgood was released later, but Captain John died from worry over her fate."

"Later when Goody Tyler was examined by Increase Mather, father of Cotton, and a man of discernment, she admitted that she had confessed under duress, having been told that she'd hang if she denied anything."

"Mistress Mary Parker, who was hanged, I didn't know very well. She lived over beyond Great Pond in North Parish. Little Mercy Wardwell and debt-ridden William Barker, who had joined them in afflicting Timothy Swan, a sickly youth who died in February 1692."

"All others accused were freed in the general delivery by proclamation, in May, 1693, and to quench any more witch-finding ardor, brought suit for slander against their accusers."

"It grows late. If you'll stay here, I'll go down to the tree where Tom carved our initials within a lovers' knot, many years ago. I have a message for it."

"What a woman she must have been!" I thought. "Brave, loyal, tender-hearted. How she must have loved life!"

The sky brightened while I waited and a thin sickle of moon cut the eastern sky. "Martha," I called, but there was no reply. Only the chill of dawn and a church-bell striking.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE WEDDING—

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is it improper for an engaged couple to pool their money and buy one worthwhile gift for a bride, to whose wedding and reception they both have been invited?

Answer: One present sent by two engaged people is entirely proper.

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is it permissible for me to buy my husband a wedding ring now, after we've been married more than three years? The double ring ceremony was not used and he would like a ring, too. Is this ever done?

Answer: I don't know that it is ever done, but there is no reason in the world why it should not be. If your husband would like to have a ring and you want to give him one, by all means buy the ring you would have bought, have it marked as it would have been marked, and put it on his finger—with perhaps a pledge of even deeper tenderness than you could have made three years ago.

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is a flower girl out of place in a very simple wedding, which is to take place on the lawn of an old country house? The bride is wearing a simple white dress and hat, and her only attendant will wear the same type of clothes in pink and brown. They will wear corsages. What should the flower girl wear if she may be included?

Answer: It would be quite all right to have a flower girl. If she is very little, she might wear one of her own white dresses. If she is older, she would wear pink and brown to match the maid of honor.

My dear Mrs. Post: My fiancé has two sisters my age, whom I know, but we are entirely separate groups. I am having a party at the country club this month at which the news of our engagement is being given out. Because of the nature of the party, ought I invite these sisters to it? If so, should I ask their mother, too?

Answer: If you are having a general party, I think you will have to invite them all. But if it is to be a very small party, and including only a few of your intimate friends, it will not be necessary—unless you are going to make a great deal of the announcement.

First Use of Celery
Celery was first used in its present form during the Seventeenth century in England, France, Italy, Holland and elsewhere. No great degree of perfection was reached until in the Nineteenth century, when considerable attention was given to the development and improvement of varieties, about 1825. Another revival of interest came in the period from 1834 to 1895.

Stowe School Notes

Marks closed for the first term Thursday, November 1. The report cards will be given out next week.

During the first school month there were only two tardy marks in the whole eighth grade. This is an unusually good record for a class with 143 members. Let us hope that the seventh grade will lessen its total of twenty-three.

Ogden Nash on the New Deal

Higgledy, piggledy, my black hen,
She lays eggs for gentlemen.
Gentlemen come every day
To count what my black hen doth lay.
If perchance she lays too many
They fine me a pretty penny;
If perchance she fails to lay,
The gentlemen a bonus pay.

Mumbledly, pumbledly, my red cow,
She's cooperating now.
At first she didn't understand
That milk production must be planned;
She didn't understand at first
She either had to plan or burst.
But now the government reports
She's giving pints instead of quarts.

Fiddle-de-dee, my next-door neighbors,
They are giggling at their labours.
First they plant the tiny seed,
Then they water, then they weed,
Then they hoe and prune and lop,
Then they raise a record crop.
Then they laugh their sides a-sunder
And plow the whole caboodle under.

Abacadabra, thus we learn,
The more you create, the less you earn,
The less you earn, the more you're given,
The less you lead, the more you're driven,
The more destroyed, the more they feed,
The more you pay, the more they need,
The more you earn, the less you keep,
And now I lay me down to sleep.

Negro Tenor to Sing Here Friday

A dramatic story of triumph over the most adverse circumstances lies behind Roland Hayes, the great Negro tenor who will give a recital at George Washington auditorium on Friday evening, November 9. The world may see his smile but he does not show the scar which Roland Hayes bears on his arm, mute testimony of his days as a moulder in a stove factory. Nor can he show other scars that exist in the heart of Roland Hayes when he reflects on his early days on a humble Georgia farm when as a child he helped his widowed mother to eke out a meager living. His mother, an ex-slave, looked to the boy, Roland, for her main support so that cruel, though much of his early labors may seem, they were welcomed by Hayes as a means to make ends meet at home, and a step towards entering college.

Roland Hayes

Roland Hayes sang at his work, according to the way of his race, and his friends noticed his voice. But he had no conception of a singer's career until one day, by chance, he discovered a world that he did not suspect existed.

He discovered it when he heard some phonograph records of Eames and Caruso. "It was as if a bell rang in my heart," he says, and from that moment his path was clear to him.

He put himself through Fisk University at Nashville, Tennessee, and there he got the cultural background needed by a serious concert artist. As was to be expected he was the star of the famous Fisk Jubilee Singers.

Coming to Boston with them, he decided to settle here and study further. After two years he sent for his mother to come and live with him. Used to having her own home, however humble, his ex-slave mother could not brook living in an apartment. They scarred her with their confining aspect. So Roland secured a four-room house, and with this added expense he soon went broke. They had a house but nothing to put in it. He made her a bed out of packing cases and slept on a couple of chairs himself.

Scraping together expenses for a song recital in Jordan Hall, he met with artistic success but financial loss. Several others fared the same way. And then Roland Hayes took the one last great chance. Without any capital he planned a recital in Boston's famous Symphony Hall, seating 2500. His name had by this time begun to be heard and at last he sang before a packed house. At last he had got his foot on the first rung of the ladder. He began to climb slowly, painstakingly . . . but surely. England saw a reputation of the Boston success and he received a command to sing before the King and Queen. Then came a long succession of artistic triumphs both in this country and abroad until today Roland Hayes is a familiar name to all the world and great audiences pack houses in cities here and in Europe to hear a former plough boy and foundry moulder who is now one of the greatest of all tenors and who will be heard in a recital at George Washington Auditorium on Friday evening, November 9.

Bacon Proposes Plan to Lower Auto Insurance

Has Plan to Reduce Number of Highway Accidents

Lieut.-Gov. Bacon, commenting on the heavy toll taken by accidents over the holiday, predicted that, under the plan he contemplates inaugurating upon his election as governor, he would be able to reduce the terrible record of slaughter and accidents on the streets and highways of Massachusetts during the next two years upwards of 25 per cent and that as a result, insurance rates would be cut in the same ratio. He said: "I have stated that reduction of automobile insurance rates cannot be affected by any magic manipulation of figures nor by the discharge of competent, loyal administrators. My opponent has become so imbued with the mania for the discharge of public employees that his first reaction to higher insurance rates is to throw somebody out. On the publication of the 1935 automobile rates, he stated his method of reducing these rates would be to throw the insurance commissioner out of office."

"Let us face the facts of insurance. We are unintentionally but most certainly killing 800 people and injuring close to 50,000 more every year, on our highways in Massachusetts by means of the automobile. A recent check-up on the habits of our drivers was undertaken by the Massachusetts Highway Accident Survey directed by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology."

"They stationed observers not only at street corners, on hills, at curves, but also put observers in cruising cars so that a more accurate picture of the action of other drivers could be obtained. And what did they find after making observations on more than 500,000 cars? That one car in every ten at the time of observation was committing a violation of the law of some kind continually. In other words practically every one of us is guilty of some violation of safe driving and thereby running the risk of a serious accident or injury, or possibly death."

"I propose to introduce at the Registry of Motor Vehicles a live, vibrant, stimulating bureau of education and safety which will have for its purpose the reaching into the minds of every one of our motorists and inculcating in their minds the fundamental principles of safe driving. I propose to make every one of our driving motorists safety conscious and not accident minded. I propose to make him aware of the horror of maimed limbs and lives. I promise you that with the establishment of such a forceful agency for the broadcasting of education, our accident records will drop rapidly, and with it the exacting drain on the pocketbook in payment of these accidents that are now such a terrific economic and humanitarian loss."

Syrians Endorse Gaspar G. Bacon

A movement among Massachusetts citizens of Syrian birth and extraction, originating among themselves, is proving a potent factor in the success of the Bacon campaign for Governor, representing as it does more than 25,000 highly literate, industrious and thrifty citizens.

At a meeting of key men and women representing practically all the Syrian communities in the state, it was brought out strongly that their people are strong admirers of Gaspar G. Bacon, because of his long study of state governmental problems that directly affect them—such as taxation and other concerns of home ownership—and his continual friendly attitude toward them as a group.

Leaders of Syrian communities from many distant parts of the state attended, including Fall River, Lawrence, Worcester, Springfield, Great Barrington and North Adams, besides cities and towns of Greater Boston. The message that these representatives, who included a number of men prominent in the medical and legal professions, brought, which was reinforced by letters from a number of other communities, expressed an agreement to organize local committees among their own people and in every case to hold a special rally.

To cap the climax, and to add to the irony of the claim that it was set up in order to promote industrial self government, it provides that when an industry, or group of industries, in good faith accept its rulings and sign a code which is to regulate their business, the President may, without notice or hearing or assignment even of a cause, cancel or modify the provisions of the code. In other words, the sanctity of contractual rights and agreements has no place whatever in the administration of this, the flower of federal bureaucracy.

Have Industry and Business Lost Liberties?

The government has established public management of private business. It has fixed prices and wages by governmental order. It has tried to unionize labor by federal command.

It has gone farther. It has fixed the rate and quantity of output of various industries. It has prohibited them the right to improve their plants by the replacement of obsolete machinery with modern machinery calculated to reduce operating costs. It has, through the R.F.C. as a co-partner, attempted to withhold badly needed financial credit from any manufacturer who did not bow to its dictates.

Croquet an Ancient Game; Roque Calls for Science

The old game of croquet is played on any space 90 by 45 feet. The apparatus consists of eight balls with mallets, two stakes and ten wire arches, the center arch being formed by two wires. Passing the ball through an arch gives the player another turn. Striking an opponent's ball gives player the right to take two shots, or to place ball beside opponent's and strike so as to send the other out of position. After he has done this he is said to be dead on that particular player and may not repeat this performance until he has sent his ball through an arch. A rover is a ball which has completed the circuit but has not touched the home stake; it may play on every other ball on the field and is not considered dead to any other ball, except that he cannot hit the same ball twice in one turn.

A scientific form of the game, called Roque, is played on courts 36 by 72 feet, with angles cut off by 8-foot corner pieces. The space is enclosed by heavy timbers, which may be used in making carom shots as on a billiard table. In this game the balls are 3 1/4 inches in diameter and the wickets or arches are only 3 1/2 inches. This is a game for two persons, while croquet may be played by any number up to eight.

Captivity Agrees With Vultures

Despite the fact that in its natural way of living the vulture spends much of its time soaring high in the air, captivity has been found to agree with these birds remarkably well. Specimens living in menageries have been known to attain an age of thirty or forty years, which is undoubtedly a greater age than they are likely to reach under normal conditions. Commenting on this fact, a zoo correspondent for the London Observer remarks that the instinct of most animals is to lounge rather than to work, so long as they are kept well provided with food, and that the vultures don't mind having freedom restricted so long as they do not have to work for a living.

RED CROSS AGENCIES SAFEGUARD HEALTH

First Aid, Life Saving, Nursing Care, Promote Health and Safety

Five outstanding services make up the health-conservation program of the American Red Cross, according to the annual report just issued in Washington. These services are first aid and life saving, which together have trained more than a million persons; nursing, with an active enrollment of 36,133 registered nurses; Public Health Nursing, conducted by 750 nurses in 424 chapters last year; and Home Hygiene, which has taught more than 700,000 men and women simple ways of caring for the sick at home.

"The achievements of the Red Cross in public health nursing place it among the leaders in this field," said James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations. "This service was organized in 1919 to meet needs developed by the World War and the ravages of the flu epidemic which in 1918-1919 took so great a toll of life."

"Since that time Red Cross nursing services have been pioneers in more than one half of the counties in the United States. Many services we established were taken over later by civic, state and federal agencies, and the Red Cross continues to establish services in other new fields. Red Cross nurses made more than a million visits to patients last year, and 629,025 children in schools were inspected."

"Red Cross courses in home hygiene and care of the sick are especially important in times of depression, because they teach families to maintain hygienic conditions in their own homes and to recognize symptoms of illness

Swell Material

"I'm very sorry you didn't like my cakes," said the tea-shop proprietress, haughtily, "but I can assure you this business has been built up almost entirely on my cookery!" "I don't doubt it, madam," said the customer. "With a few more buns like these you could build a house!"

Mr. Heely to Make No Radical Changes

New Headmaster of Lawrenceville School in New Jersey Intends to Follow in Footsteps of Predecessor—Well-liked by Phillips Students

When Allan V. Heely, assistant dean of Phillips academy, is inducted as headmaster of Lawrenceville school in New Jersey on Thanksgiving day, he does not intend to go down there with "a plan under my arm, but rather to learn my job and to try to build constructively in harmony with the outstanding achievement of my predecessor, Dr. Abbott." He made this statement this week to a Townsman reporter while he was still trying to unravel the intricacies of his three present positions: headmaster of one school, assistant dean in another, and also instructor of English. Formally elected last week by the Lawrenceville trustees, Mr. Heely is actually serving as headmaster of the New Jersey school, although he is three hundred miles away from it.

The new headmaster is very much impressed by the work of his predecessor, who in the last fifteen years had developed the school to a remarkable extent, physically, academically and spiritually. The school to outward appearances is much like Phillips academy; it has 300 pupils and is 125 years old—a large school and an old school. The faculty numbers 60. It covers 500 acres and has its own nine-hole golf course. It is five miles from Princeton and 30 miles from Mr. Heely's home town, Plainfield.

Instead of four classes it has five forms. The fifth form, or senior class, comes particularly under the care of the headmaster, and in fact his house, especially the library, is open to the free access of seniors. The school is delightfully intimate and informal.

Seventh Headmaster

Mr. Heely will be the seventh headmaster of the school. The second headmaster was Rev. Alexander Hamilton Phillips, related to the Phillips family which founded Andover and Exeter.

Mr. Heely came here to Andover in 1924 as an instructor of English. It was not long after he arrived that the rumor developed that he was to follow Dr. Stearns as headmaster of Andover academy, and the rumor persisted ever since. Whether it had any basis in fact is not known, but it certainly had a basis in the wishes of the students. Class ballots time and time again linked Mr. Heely with the late Professor Forbes and Headmaster Dr. Fuess as the most popular teacher inside and outside the classroom, the most polished, the pleasantest, and the most respected. Charlie Forbes was made acting headmaster when Dr. Stearns retired, and on the well-liked Latin professor's death, Dr. Fuess was elevated to the headmastership. It is not too much of a stretch of imagination to say that in all probability Al Heely would have been next at Andover's helm.

Mr. Heely graduated from Phillips academy in 1915. While at the academy he was editor-in-chief of the Philanthropist, leader of the mandolin club and a member of P.A.E. At Yale he was chairman of the Junior Prom committee, leader of the banjo-mandolin club, on the editorial board of the Yale Record, a member of Alpha Delta Phi and of the Elhiu club.

During the war he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Field Artillery. He was held in this country for training of troops. After being mustered out in December, 1918, he returned to Yale and graduated in 1919.

He spent a few months with the Wendell P. Colton Advertising company, and then became assistant secretary to Claflins, Inc., wholesale dry goods merchants in New York. He resigned this position to return to the academy in 1924.

Well Known Locally

He is well-known in Andover. At present he is chairman of the Andover Recreation and acting chairman of the Andover Council of Boy Scouts. He is a member of the American Legion. An entertaining speaker he has always been in great demand with local organizations.

Mr. Heely twice ran for the local school committee, and at a time when the antagonism against Phillips academy was at its height because of the state school matter he polled an unusually large vote, just missing election both times. There was no doubt in the minds even of those who voted against him because of his connection with the academy that he was eminently qualified for election.

The new first lady of Lawrenceville, Mrs. Heely, has lived in Andover practically all her life. She was born in Honesdale, Penn. She attended Miss Porter's school in Farmington, Conn., and the Winsor school in Boston in addition to Andover academy here. She is a member of the Junior League and the Vincent club in Boston.

For State Representative

Romeo E. David

The only Andover candidate for state representative from this district is Atty. Romeo E. David of Haverhill street, whose many friends have been waging a vigorous campaign in his behalf in an endeavor to have Andover represented by a local man in the state legislature. Attorney David is the only Republican campaigning for one of the two positions as representative.

This is Mr. David's second campaign for representative. Two years ago he came very near being elected, and in fact was far ahead of the field in Andover. He received 3004 votes here, whereas the victorious candidates received only 1800 and 1141 respectively. He led in the count up to the last two precincts of South Lawrence.

He is well-known in legal circles here. He is frequently called upon to give lectures on government, history, literature and the sciences, in all of which he is well-versed. He majored in political sciences in college.

Thomas J. Lane

Representative Thomas J. Lane is seeking re-election to the House of Representatives from the Sixth Essex District, comprising South Lawrence and Andover. Representative Lane has served this district for four terms, and in support of his candidacy he has introduced numerous measures that he introduced, voted for, and fought for during his term. He is regarded by the best interest of the people of South Lawrence and Andover.

Some of the bills Representative Lane filed to benefit the citizenry of the Town of Andover are as follows: A bill to abolish the five-cent toll charge existing between the City of Lawrence and the Town of Andover; a bill to widen and reconstruct North Main street in the Town of Andover; a bill to widen and reconstruct that part of the Boston-Lawrence road between Reading and the Town of Andover. Due to the efforts of Representative Lane, a hearing was held before the Department of Public Works, and that part of the Boston-Lawrence road between the Andover By-Pass and Porter road was remodeled and widened. On petition of Representative Lane, a sidewalk was built between Porter road and Carter's corner with an expense to the Department of Public Works on the State Highway Funds of Three Thousand Dollars. Representative Lane also filed a bill to install traffic signals at Wilson's corner, and as a result of this petition, lights were placed at this dangerous intersection in the Town of North Andover.

Mr. Lane also filed a bill before the General Court to widen and reconstruct Lowell street from Shawheen village to the West Tewksbury line, and as a result of his petition the Department of Public Works this year approved this stretch of highway as a secondary project and within the last two weeks, the Federal Government has placed its stamp of approval on this new piece of construction. It is expected that some time in the near future work will start on this narrow and dangerous stretch of highway.

As a member of the Legislature, Representative Lane filed an order for an investigation of the gas and electric rates in that district served by the Lawrence Gas & Electric company. Representative Lane also filed a resolve requesting a special unpaid commission to make a study of the five-cent toll charge between Andover and the City of Lawrence.

He has appeared before the Department of Public Utilities on many occasions to protect the interest of his constituents in the Town of Andover. Mr. Lane appeared before the Public Utilities in opposition to the discontinuance of the passenger train service between Lowell Junction and the City of Lawrence, also appeared in opposition to the elimination of one of the early morning trains that rendered service to the people of Ballardvale, Andover, and the City of Lawrence. He also spoke before the Commission for the elimination of the whistle signal of the Boston & Maine railroad at the Essex street crossing, and also appeared at the Chickering street grade crossing, which were finally abolished. He was one of the staunch supporters of that Federal Project in the Town of Andover, namely, the Junior high school, and through his efforts the approval of the finances and other matters pertaining to this wonderful improvement was voted on by the State Emergency Finance Board.

As chairman of Mayor Walter A. Griffin's survey committee on the rates and service of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway, his committee brought about the five-cent fare between Andover square and Porter road in the Town of Andover. Through the activities of this committee, the cars were abolished, and in place of that service, new and up-to-date busses were placed on this trip between Lawrence and Andover.

Representative Lane has a remarkable career in the Legislature as a legislator for South Lawrence and Andover legislative district. He has been fearless and courageous in the State House, with the result that he has accomplished things which have benefited the Sixth Essex District voters. He will keep up the good work when he returns the coming January. During his membership at the Legislature, Representative Lane has served on the Committee on Cities and Constitutional Law. For the past four years, he has served as a member of the important judiciary committee. Representative Lane has served for eight years as secretary and treasurer of the Essex County Legislators association. The South Lawrence man was also chosen to serve on the special Recess Debating board relative to the establishment of reservations, and he was elected by the committee to act in the capacity of clerk.

The only pledge which Representative Lane has made, or intends to make in his campaign to the voters, is the continuance of that same honorable and honest character of service that he has always given to this district.

For Register of Probate

Arthur D. Fowler

Padded payrolls will grow like weeds, operating expenses will go skyrocketing, and wishy-washy inefficiency will be rampant in Essex county's registry of probate if the electorate votes into the registry's office a man demagogic as Arthur D. Fowler of Marblehead. Republican candidate for the post, contended in several addresses throughout the county last night.

"I am certain that the people of our county do not want their probate court to fall into the doldrums of inefficiency, or to tolerate padded payrolls and increased costs of operation," he declared. "But these evils must and will follow if the registry is to be conducted with an eye only to political expediency."

Mr. Fowler, who has served as assistant register at Salem for more than six years, pointed to his record as a public servant in the probate registry. He told his audiences that during his regime he has lowered the operating costs 20.8 per cent, and that at the same time he has modernized the system of records until the office now boasts a standard of efficiency which it never had before.

The new register, who is a member of the American Legion, and who has been a lawyer for 15 years, asserted that the probate register's chair was never meant to be occupied by a person who lives by his political wits.

He called attention to the experience which official and said that the high level of efficiency which the registry has attained during that period will be continued if the people of the county promote him to the office of register.

For Governor's Council

Eugene B. Fraser

Eugene B. Fraser, senior member of the Massachusetts governor's executive council since 1918 from the Fifth district and prominent in National, state and local Republican affairs for more than a half century, has never yet made a speech on his own candidacy. Whenever present at a political gathering, he has only consented to requests for pertinent remarks, if somebody is missing and should be represented and then he pleads the cause of the absent one.

Councillor Fraser, who is a candidate for re-election, has served under four governors during his six consecutive terms; namely Channing H. Cox, Alvan T. Fuller, Frank G. Allen and Joseph B. Ely; and has been a close personal friend to each. His candidacy for re-election this year was inspired by a number of requests from various sections of the district that he continue his services as the county's direct representative in the Governor's office and that he continue to lend himself to the party organization and influence in the county.

During the past year, Mr. Fraser was mentioned frequently as the logical Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, but he chose to give the major portion of his political consideration and interest to the office of councillor, after being persuaded that Essex county would need his experience and political sagacity more than ever at the State House, during the next two years.

As senior and Republican member of the council and its most important committees, under the administration of a Democratic governor, he has been the vital point of administrative operation of executive business and in a position of unusual influence on Beacon Hill, during the past four years.

Councillor Fraser is chairman of the important committee on waterways, public lands and railroads and member of the committees on finance, accounts and warrants and on military and naval affairs.

Prior to and during his terms as member of the Governor's Council, he has frequently declined mayoralty and other official candidacies in Lynn and in the county and state. He has served as a member of the Republican city committee for more than 25 years and as its treasurer for the past 17 years. He has been very active in civic and community affairs over a long period and prominent as a business executive and sportsman for more than 40 years and has always shown great capacity for efforts toward community improvement. He is a member of the Lynn Stadium Commission and while he has sponsored or aided numerous amateur sports and athletic events, he has always been particularly keen on baseball, one of his recent sponsorships being "Councillor Fraser's National Champions," winners of the national amateur baseball championships the past two years.

What Those Ballot Questions Mean

The following explanation of what the referendum questions mean is reprinted from a previous issue of the Townsman. It explains just what a "Yes" or a "No" vote will mean.

Liquor Questions

There will be two questions on the ballot dealing with liquor. The first deals with licenses for all alcoholic beverages, including hard liquors; the second is limited to wines, beer and malt liquors. Both were approved at the March election. The selectmen, however, decided not to give hard liquor licenses to restaurants, so that at present the package stores are licensed under the first (hard liquor) question and the restaurants under the second (wines and beer) question.

Were the town to vote "Yes" on question one, and "No" on question two it does not mean that restaurants would go out and package stores stay. While the selectmen have refused to license restaurants under the hard liquor question, the A.B.C. would undoubtedly force them to grant such licenses if the second question were defeated.

The various possibilities under the two questions, as far as Andover is concerned, would be: (1) If the town votes "Yes" on both questions, the present situation will continue. (2) If the town votes "No" on the first (hard liquor) question and "Yes" on the second (beer and wine) question, no hard liquor could be sold, and the package stores would go out, with the restaurants remaining under the same licenses as at present; (3) if the town votes "Yes" on the hard liquor question and "No" on the second, the present situation would continue, with the possibility of the restaurants having hard liquor licenses; (4) if the town votes "No" on both questions, no liquor could be sold here legally.

Trapping Act

"The Humane Trapping Act" of 1930 outlawed the use of the steel-jawed trap, except near buildings and on cultivated lands as a protection against so-called "vermin." The proposed amendment would allow any town or city, through a municipal election, to go back to the use of the steel-jawed trap; in other words it permits local option on the question.

If the state votes "Yes" on the trapping question, it would mean that any town or city could allow the use of such inhumane traps if it so voted at a municipal election or town meeting; it would also allow the Commissioner of Conservation to suspend the 1930 act. Were the state to vote "No" on the question, it would mean that the Humane Trapping Act of 1930 would continue in force.

A "Yes" vote would not necessarily mean that the steel traps would be used in Andover, unless the Commissioner of Conservation so decided. It would mean that the town itself could decide whether it wished to allow steel traps or not.

Betting Questions

The third question is the easiest to understand. It is split into two parts, the first asking whether pari-mutuel betting should be allowed on licensed horse races in this county, and the second asking the same about licensed dog races. A "Yes" vote on either by the county would mean that the pari-mutuels would be permitted in the county.

More E R A Work Here This Month

The town's allotment for E.R.A. work for November is $8000, the same as last month. Actually, however, the sum is an increase, since there were five pay-days last month, or $1600 per week, whereas there will be but four pay-days this month, or $2000 a week. This will mean that additional men may be employed.

Work is continuing on the Lowell Junction road water extension, and work on the road itself is underway. Spring Grove cemetery is still one of the projects.

Two water-holes for the use of the fire department are being put in, one of High Plain road and the other on Wood Hill road.

Abbot Academy Notes

The Class of 1935 held its Senior picnic at Haggets Pond on Tuesday afternoon and evening of this week.

On Wednesday afternoon the Woman's Union of the South Church, gave a very delightful tea for the Abbot girls who attend that church.

At the Hallowe'en party this year the whole school was divided into groups of about twenty each who participated in a series of amusing games. Many original costumes representing bats, ghosts and the like, were in evidence, the prize for the best costumes going to Elizabeth Kennedy of Portland, Maine, and Elsie Strahl of New Rochelle, New York, who represented very realistic witches. Several of the faculty gave a skit which was applauded, the performance of Miss Butterfield being greatly appreciated.

An informal recital, followed by tea, was given by Miss Tingley, the new Vocal Instructor, on Friday afternoon in the Draper Hall parlors. The recital served to introduce Miss Tingley to the student body and at a later date a more formal recital will be given.

In connection with the new course in Business Principles, Miss Bailey has asked Miss Florence Barnard to speak to the students on "The Use of Money." Miss Barnard is the Educational Director of the American Association for Economic Education and started the work in business training in the Brookline and Boston public High Schools. The lecture will be illustrated and comes at the usual time for Hall Exercises on Saturday afternoon.

The Rev. Raymond Clapp of the Schauffler School, Cleveland, Ohio, will speak on Sunday evening. His subject will be: "Religious Education and Christian Education."

Rev. and Mrs. Charles W. Henry will be at home to the students and teachers of Abbot Academy who attend Christ church, Wednesday from 4 to 6.

Twenty disabled veterans from the United States Veterans hospital at Bedford were the guests of Phillips Academy's Toe H club at the football game between the academy and New Hampshire Fresh Saturday.
